

THE COPYRIGHT
HUB

Copyright Hub Services

- Provides infrastructure on the Internet
- Identify digital (or physical) content
- The Hub makes the connection (resolves) back to a system that can tell you how it can be used
- Might offer licences
- Might tell you its free “if” / Creative Commons
- Might just link back to contact details
- Freely Available
- Open source technology – April

Background

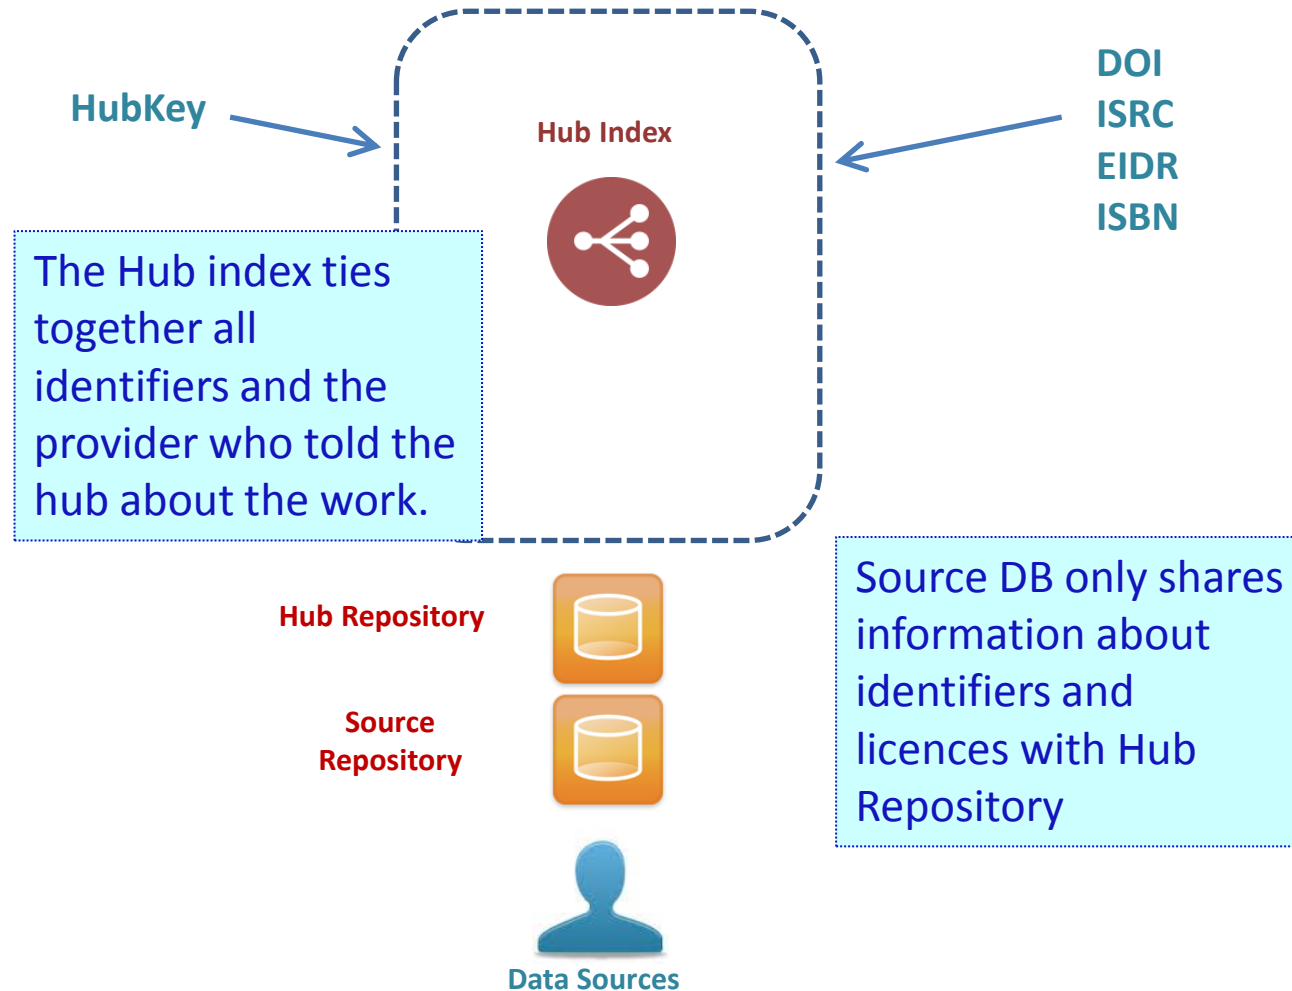

Copyright Hub Aims

- To open up new markets
- To not interfere with existing business models
- To automate low value / high volume transactions
- Cross border, industry led, voluntary, non-exclusive
- Encourages use of identifiers
- Funded by the creative industries

Working like the Internet

- Any identifiers can be used to resolve queries through the Copyright Hub
- They connect to servers which know about the content (“repositories”)

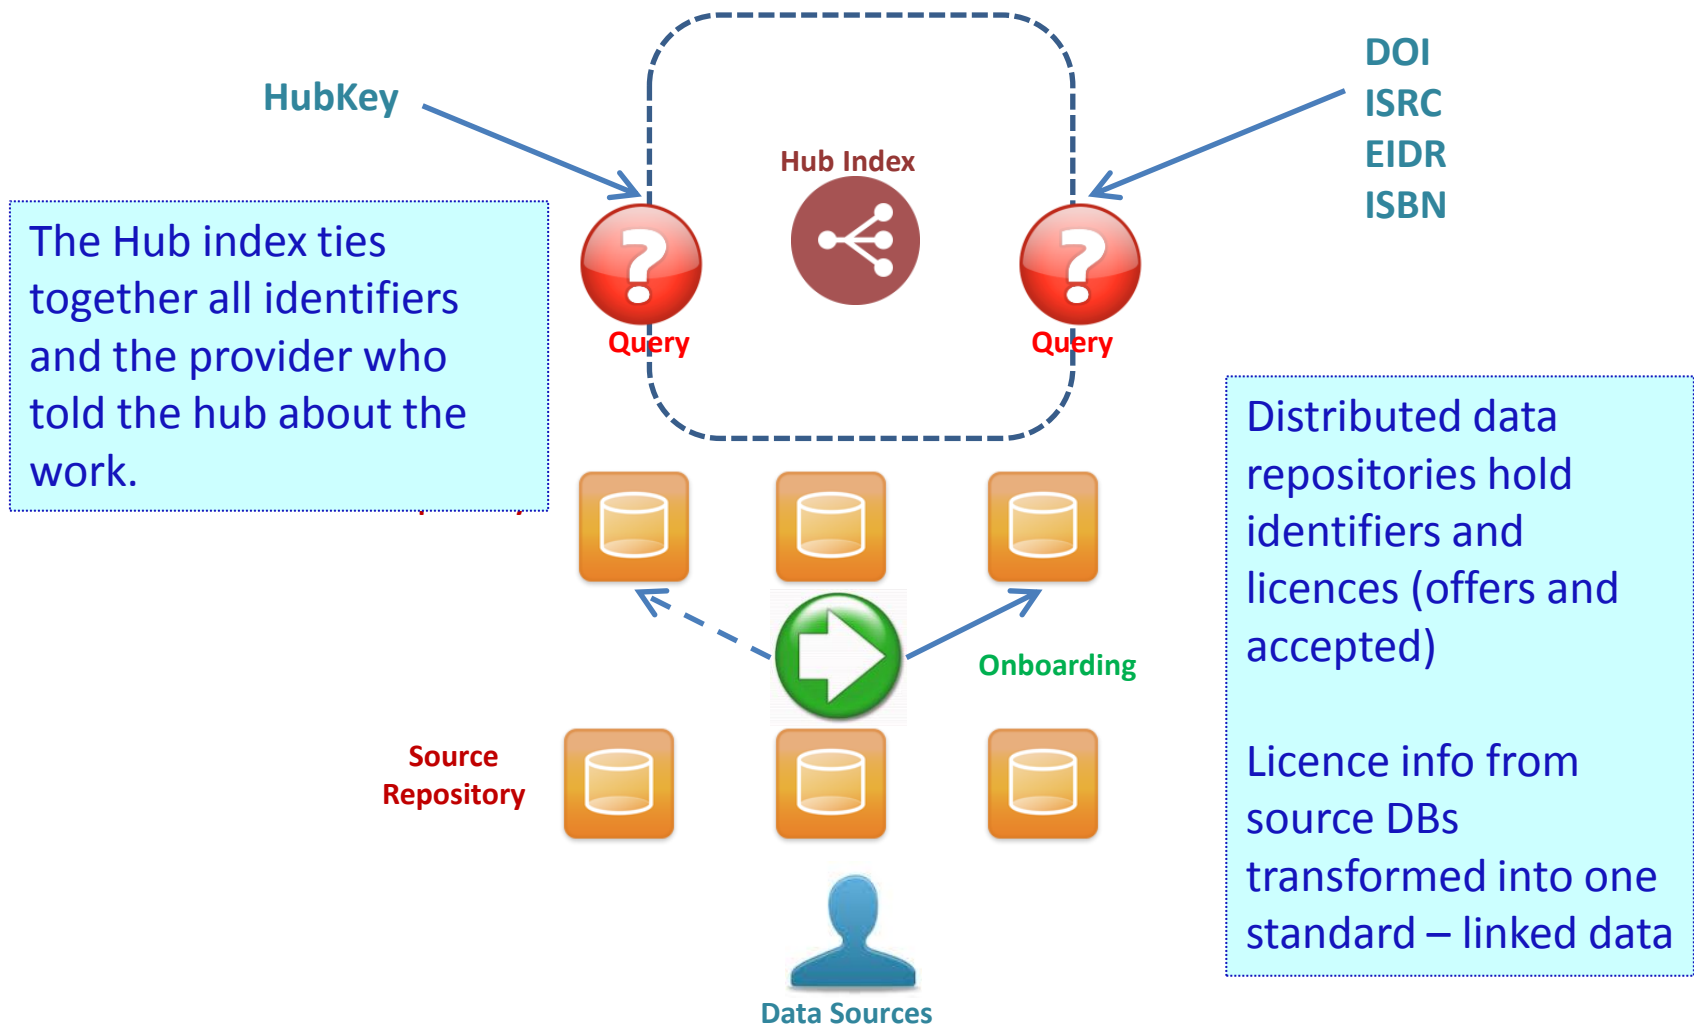

Identifiers and Hub Keys

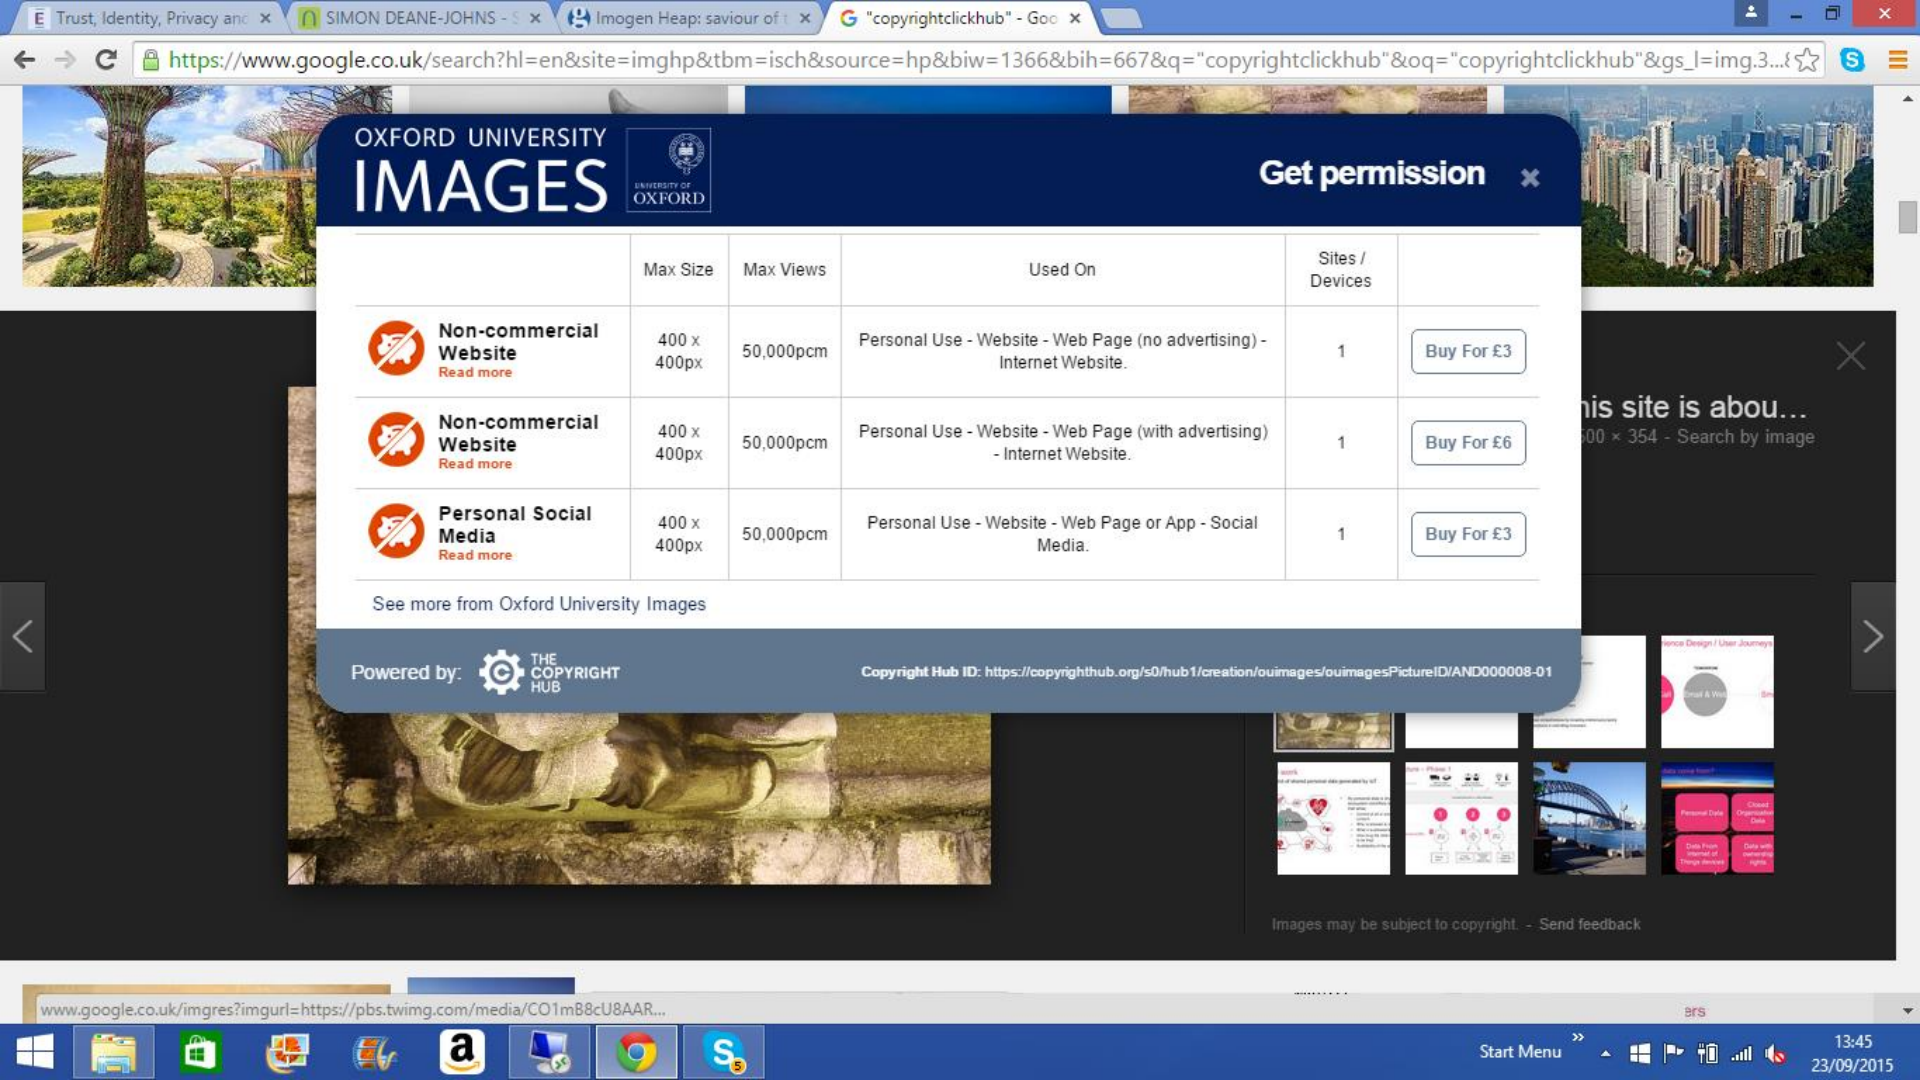

Working like the Internet

- Any identifiers can be used to resolve queries through the Copyright Hub
- They connect to multiple servers which know about the content (“repositories”)
- The repositories are able to use a structured language about licences (ODRL just now)
- Rights work machine-to-machine
- Similar to how the Domain Name System works

A year on from 'Die Hard', Los Angeles cop John McClane is set to meet up with wife Holly (Bonnie Bedelia) on Christmas Eve, this time at Dulles airport in Washington DC. However, when terrorists take over the airport in an attempt to rescue dictator Esperanza (Franco Nero) from his incoming flight, it is up to McClane to restore order and ensure that Holly's plane lands safely. Get that sweaty vest out, and put some shoes on this time.
