Join Book Industry Communication (BIC), Publishing Accessibility Action Group (PAAG) and Wiley for their Accessibility Summit bringing together publishers, librarians, end users and accessibility advocates to explore how we can make not only the content but the user's discoverability of the content and entire use journey more accessible.

Accessibility is both an important responsibility and an opportunity for the publishing industry to reach a wider audience and generate increased revenue. As populations age and people's needs change throughout their lives, accessible formats and inclusive design become increasingly important in enabling more people to discover, access and enjoy content. Understanding and responding to all accessibility needs can remove barriers, improve the reading experience and open up new audiences for the publishing industry.

Covering both digital and printed content and designed to bring together a broad range of perspectives, the Summit will feature diverse expert panels reflecting the experiences and knowledge across the industry. This is not intended to be a one-way conversation: audience participation throughout the day will be actively encouraged, giving attendees the opportunity to share experiences, pain-points, ask questions, challenge assumptions and help shape the discussion.

The Summit aims to foster a collaborative understanding of what meaningful accessibility looks like now and what it could look like in the future.

Whether you are already advancing accessibility within your organisation or looking to understand first or next steps, join us in Berlin to exchange knowledge, connect with peers, explore business opportunities, and help to shape a more accessible future for the industry and its end users.

Further details on the programme, speakers, and registration will be announced soon. You can keep informed by signing up to the Summit's Expression of Interest Form.
